

LIVERPOOL POLICE COURT.

MONDAY, JUNE 10.
BEFORE MR. RAFFLES.

OBTAINING NEWSPAPERS BY FALSE PRETEXTS.—Peter Waters, a lad apparently about twelve years of age, whose parents reside in Mann-street, Toxteth-park, was brought up in custody charged with having obtained six dozen copies of the Weekly Mercury from Mr. John Johnson, newsvendor, Lord-street, by false pretences. It appeared that on Saturday week a man named Thomas Palmer, who sells newspapers on the landing-stage, requested the prisoner to tell another lad to go up to Mr. Johnson's for his papers. Instead of doing this, however, Waters went for the papers himself, obtained six dozen copies of the Weekly Mercury, which he sold and spent the money. On Saturday last he attempted to obtain a second supply of newspapers, was then recognised by Mr. Johnson as the lad who had committed the fraud on the previous Saturday, and was given into custody. On being asked what he had done with the money he realised by the sale of the papers, he said he spent it in cakes. He was remanded until the following day.

CHARGE OF SENDING A THREATENING LETTER.—A middle-aged man named Joseph Harley, a glassblower, was placed in the dock charged with having sent a letter to Mr. Edward Cannington, Vauxhall-road, threatening to take his life. The complainant said he had been informed that the prisoner had obtained a quantity of powder and shot on the day he was apprehended, as though he intended to carry out his threat. The magistrate said he would like the prisoner to undergo a medical examination, for his own impression was that he (Harley) was not of sound mind. Mr. Cannington said that was his impression also. The prisoner was remanded in order that he might be examined by a medical man.

A WOMAN CHARGED WITH ATTEMPTING TO DROWN HERSELF.—Bridget Reynolds, a woman residing in Barmouth-street, was placed in the dock charged with attempting to drown herself on the previous evening, at the Collingwood Dock. Police-constable No. 375 stated that on the previous evening he noticed the prisoner standing on the wall of the Collingwood Dock, "tucking up her clothes," and preparing to jump into the dock. The officer prevented her, but she went to the other end of the dock and said she would drown herself. The officer then took her in custody, and asked her why she had attempted to put an end to herself. She replied that her son had been brought up at the police-court charged with some offence, and remanded for a week, and that troubled her. She now repeated that statement, but promised never to attempt to destroy herself again. She was discharged with a caution.

STABBING CASE.—Patrick Mannion, a labourer, living in Henry Edward-street, was brought up charged with having stabbed Mr. Edwards, a labourer, living in the same street. It appeared that on Sunday evening there was a disturbance in the street, when the prisoner came out of the house flourishing a large clasp knife. The complainant came up the street, and as soon as the prisoner saw him he rushed at him and struck him with the knife, inflicting a wound about ten inches long and half-an-inch deep, near the groin. Complainant had not spoken to the prisoner that night. The prisoner, who had nothing to say in defence, was remanded.

PROSECUTION BY THE SOCIETY FOR THE PREVENTION OF CRUELTY TO ANIMALS.—William Brown, a driver in the employ of John Hook, contractor, Upper Hill-street, Toxteth-park, was charged with working a horse in an unfit state. Inspector Smith, an officer of the above society, said that on Saturday he saw the defendant driving the animal, which was suffering from a raw wound on the shoulder. Brown was fined 10s. and costs.

SUSPICIOUS CHARACTERS.—Two young men named John Hines and John M'Loughlin were charged as suspicious characters. Police-constables Boyce and Dickinson said that about a quarter to twelve o'clock on Saturday night they saw the two prisoners walking down Victoria and Regent roads. They met a seafaring man who was under the influence of drink, and they stopped him and asked him for money. He made some reply which the officers did not hear. The witnesses, who were in plain clothes, then went up to them, and Hines, addressing Dickinson, said "We want you." Dickinson asked him what he wanted, and the prisoner replied, "We want money, and we'll have what money you have." Witness refused to give them any money, and they walked towards Sandhills-lane, where they stopped two seafaring men who were drunk. They asked them for money but they refused to give it, and the prisoner Hines raised his fist and attempted to strike one of the sailors, when other police officers made their appearance and the prisoners ran away, but afterwards returned, stopped another sailor, and were apprehended. The prisoner Hines now denied the charge, and the other prisoner made no defence. They were remanded.

ATTEMPTED MURDER.—A rough-looking fellow, named Robert Hughes, a sailor, living in No. 8 Court, Ray-street, was charged with having attempted to murder his wife. It appeared from the evidence of the mother of Mrs. Hughes and that of Police-constable No. 577 that on Sunday night the prisoner came home drunk. He began to sharpen a knife and then went to bed. After sleeping for two or three hours he got up and rushed down stairs to his wife, who was sitting on the doorsteps with her child. He knocked his wife down, knelt over her, and stabbed her in the throat with a knife. She seized the blade of the knife to prevent a second attack, and her right hand was severely cut in the struggle. The woman then rose and rushed into the street and gave an alarm. On the police-officer arriving he found that she was bleeding profusely from a wound on the left side of the neck, near the jugular vein. Her hand was very severely lacerated. He took her to the Vauxhall Dispensary, but the medical man there could not say whether she was in danger or not. On the officer taking the prisoner into custody and charging him with the offence, he denied it. He now repeated his statement, but was remanded.

BEFORE MESSRS. TUNNICLIFFE AND CORBALLY.
THE PRISONER AND HIS PIPE.—A rather stylishly dressed man, named David Bell, summoned Charles Naylor, a warder at Walton Gaol, upon a charge of retaining a meerschaum pipe, his property. Mr. Cobb appeared for the defendant. In 1863 the complainant was tried at the sessions for an assault, and was sentenced to a term of imprisonment which expired in April. At the time of his apprehension all the property he had in his possession was taken from him at the bridewell, and it included, he said, a large silver-mounted meerschaum pipe, worth 30s. A week after he had been in Walton Gaol, he stated that he saw the pipe in the possession of the defendant. Naylor produced a small pipe of little value, which he said was the only one sent from the bridewell as belonging to the complainant, but the latter denied that this was his pipe, and added that he saw his own pipe in Naylor's possession a week after he had been in Walton Gaol. Mr. Jones, a clerk at Walton Gaol, was called by Mr. Cobb, and he said that the property of all prisoners passed through his hands, and anything above the value of 5s. he locked up. If there had been any pipe belonging to the complainant of the value which he represented, he should have retained possession of it. The magistrates dismissed the case, telling the complainant that he must seek his remedy in another court.

BEFORE MR. MILLS.
THE CHARGE OF CRUELTY AGAINST A SHIP'S MATE.—William Edward Dixon Martin, formerly mate of the ship Halton Castle, who has been several times remanded, was again brought up on the charge of having committed a serious assault upon Thomas Lythgoe M'Kenzie, an apprentice on board the Halton Castle. Mr. Cobb (who appeared for the prosecution) asked for a further remand. He handed in a certificate from Dr. Rowe to the effect that M'Kenzie was much weaker than when the previous report—describing him to be in a precarious condition—was made. M'Kenzie, the step-father of M'Kenzie, said that the boy was sinking, and had only been kept alive by the stimulants administered to him. There had been a perceptible change for the worse since the case was last before the court. Mr. Tidswell, barrister (who appeared for the prisoner), applied that the prisoner might be admitted in bail, but the magistrate declined to accede to this application. Mr. Tidswell then applied for permission to put some questions to M'Kenzie, whose depositions were taken at his parents' house, and the application was granted, provided that the boy was in a fit state to bear cross-examination. The prisoner was then remanded for a week, with the understanding that the case should be proceeded with if M'Kenzie was able in the meantime to appear.

BIRKENHEAD POLICE COURT.

MONDAY, JUNE 10.
BEFORE MESSRS. S. LEWIS AND J. RAYNESGROFF.

A DEFENSE DENYING HIS WIFE.—Mary Ann Webb, a respectably-dressed woman, was brought up in custody charged with creating a disturbance, at two o'clock on Sunday morning, at the house of Mr. George Henry Webb, a dentist, in Price-street, and also with using threatening language. Mr. Anderson appeared for the prosecution. The complainant said he did not wish to press the charge; he only wished the prisoner to be bound over so that he should not be subject to this sort of thing again. The prisoner, he said, came to his house at two o'clock on Sunday morning, and threatened to smash his windows. She had been in the habit of annoying him almost the whole of his life. Mary Ann Webb was not the prisoner's name. "The prisoner, in an indignant manner, here exclaimed, 'He (the prosecutor) has perjured himself. He is my husband. He is on his oath. I can prove he is my husband.'—Mr. Kent (magistrate's clerk): Is there any pretence for this statement?—Mr. Anderson: Yes. Mr. Kent: Have they lived together?—Mr. Anderson: Yes. Mr. Kent: Oh, then, there is a pretence. He has been holding her up to the world as his wife.—Mr. Anderson: No, she has not.—The complainant went on to say that the prisoner had frequently annoyed him. He said that she had any legal claim on him, let her go the legal way of asserting it. She threatened to break his windows and ruin him, and all that sort of thing.—Mr. Ledward: Are you afraid of her?—Complainant: Yes; she said she would stick a knife in me. She had not a knife in her hand on Sunday morning. She said she should not live till morning. He thought she would keep her threats, especially with regard to the windows.—Prisoner: When did I threaten to take away your life?—Prosecutor: You threatened to take my life on Saturday.—Prisoner: Am I your wife?—Prosecutor: That is what I want you to prove.—Mr. Kent: Is she your wife? Prosecutor: I decline to answer that question; I cannot answer it, for there are certain circumstances connected with it which will come out in another place.—Mr. Ledward: Is she your wife? Prosecutor (after some hesitation): She is.—Mr. Hensley, the bridewell keeper, said that when the prisoner was brought to the lock-up he was asked the prosecutor if she was his wife, and he denied it.—Prisoner: It is disgraceful, if you knew all. It is I who want protection, and not him.—Mr. Ledward said the prosecutor ought to be ashamed of himself. It was a shame to lock up a woman in bridewell on a pretence of that sort.—The bridewell keeper stated that the prosecutor told him that he lived five years ago with the prisoner in Birmingham, and that he kept her there.—Mr. Anderson: I would not have appeared in this case if I had known the prisoner was his wife; I should be sorry to have done so, as I should think myself disgraced by bringing it on.—Mr. Ledward: I am glad to hear you say so.—Mr. Anderson said the prosecutor told him that he and the prisoner lived together for five years, but before coming to court, he (Mr. Anderson) asked him if he was her husband, and he denied it.—Mr. Ledward remarked that the prisoner in the first instance tried to equivocate by not kissing the book upon being sworn, and his evidence was disgraceful.—Police-officer 11, in reply to the magistrate, said he was called to take the prisoner into custody in consequence of the disturbance she was making, and the prosecutor told him she was not his wife.—Superintendent Birnie said he was at the prosecutor's premises at two o'clock in the morning, and the prisoner was making such a disturbance that people got up out of their beds, thinking there was murder in the street. He advised her to take legal means against the prosecutor, and not to create a disturbance.—The magistrates, after repeating that the prosecutor's conduct was disgraceful in denying his wife, ordered the prisoner to be discharged.

A CASE OF SUSPICION.—An elderly woman, named Isabella M'Manns, was brought up under the following circumstances:—Inspector Gunning stated that at eight o'clock on Sunday morning the prisoner was stopped in Westbourne-road with a quantity of flour, two plates, and some pieces of carpet in her possession. On being questioned she said she got the articles at Mr. Keightley's, in Kenyon-terrace, but on being taken there the servants denied all knowledge of her. She afterwards made various statements, which were found to be untrue.—Mr. Moore, who appeared for the defence, said the prisoner was in the habit of going to gentlemen's houses to get "swills," and it was probable she had told some untruth to the officer to screen the articles which she had given her the articles. Evidence having been given as to the prisoner's previous good character, the magistrates, after remarking that it was a case of great suspicion, ordered her to be discharged.

THE ALLEGED OUTRAGE ON A FEMALE.—James Cross, who was remanded on Saturday on the charge of having assaulted and attempted to rob Margaret Jamieson, an unfortunate female, under circumstances detailed in Monday's Mercury, was again brought up. Police-officer 71, who took the prisoner into custody, stated that the prosecutrix informed him that morning that the prisoner tried to bribe her with half a sovereign to keep away from the court.—The prosecutrix, on being put into the witness-box, said she did not wish to press the charge, on account of the prisoner being newly married. (Laughter.)—Mr. Ledward: You made out a very bad case on Saturday, according to what I read in the newspapers. What about this robbery; he is charged with attempting to rob you? The prosecutrix replied that the prisoner put his hand into her pocket, but whether his intention was to rob her or not she could not tell. She had only a handkerchief in her pocket.—The prisoner was then discharged.—Mr. Moore, who appeared for the defence, said he had two witnesses who would swear that the prosecutrix said if the prisoner would give her half a sovereign she would not prosecute, but he (Mr. Moore) would not allow him to do so.—The prisoner's father (well known as Counselor Cross) here addressed himself to the prosecutrix in a loud tone of voice—"You're a bad one, that's what you are. I will spend £100 on you before I shall be beat."

SUNDAY TRADING.—John Kelly, beerhouse keeper, Beckwith-street, was fined 20s. and costs, for Sunday trading.—Richard Cartwright, beerhouse keeper, St. Ann-street was mulcted in a penalty of 40s. and costs for a similar offence.

CAUTION TO MARINE STORE DEALERS.—James Murphy, marine store dealer, Shore-road, was summoned for neglecting to make entries in his book of goods he had purchased.—Inspector Gregory stated that he visited the defendant's store on the 6th instant, and found that he had made three separate purchases of iron and ropes, of which there was no entry in his book.—The defendant urged that it was the custom of persons in his trade to enter in their books in the evening the articles which had been purchased in the morning.—The Inspector said he had taken a great deal of pains to learn the defendant how to keep his book. The defendant, he added, had been previously summoned.—Mr. Ledward, after remarking that many of the marine stores gave facilities for young thieves to dispose of their plunder, ordered the defendant to pay a fine of 25s and costs.

COUNTY MAGISTRATES' COURT.

BEFORE G. H. HORSFALL AND T. D. HORBNEY, ESQS.

WILFUL DAMAGE.—George Harrison was charged with wilfully damaging some meat, the property of Jonathan West. On Saturday evening the complainant was at the Old Swan, carrying a basket of meat for Mr. Johnson, of the Cattle Market Tavern. The prisoner, who was drunk, came up to complainant and knocked the meat from his basket, damaging it very much. The prisoner, who excused himself by saying he had no recollection of what had occurred, was fined 5s. and costs for being drunk, and another 5s. for the damage.

John Murray, for being drunk and overdriving a horse on the road to the Aintree race course, was fined 2s. 6d. and costs, or in default of payment to go to goal for seven days.—John Humphreys, who had been several times previously before the court, was fined 5s. and costs, and in default of payment seven days' imprisonment, for riotous conduct at Crosby. The prisoner expressed his astonishment that whenever he went to Crosby he should get into the hands of the police. He said he had travelled in the four quarters of the globe without molestation, but, for some reason or other that he could not understand, his liberty was always interfered with at Crosby. One of the magistrates advised him to keep away from Formby in future.

ASSAULTING THE POLICE.—Fios. Campbell, a spring-cart driver, was charged with assaulting police-officers Seddon and Wabbe. On Sunday the prisoner had his cart at the race-ground, and being somewhat out of the ordinary track, police-officer Seddon asked him to move off. Upon this the prisoner struck Seddon a violent blow and behaved otherwise in a very violent manner. He also struck another officer, Wabbe, who came up to assist Seddon. The bench fined the prisoner 40s. and costs, in default of paying which he was committed to goal for 21 days.—Michael Holey, Michael Campbell, and Bridget Mannion, charged with attempting to rescue the prisoner Campbell, and throwing stones at the police, were fined 20s. and costs, and in default of payment imprisonment for 14 days.

STEALING A PAIR OF BOOTS.—Thos. Owen and Isaac Holt were charged with stealing a pair of boots from the person of John Dowd. It appeared that on Sunday morning Dowd was drunk in Pitt-street, West Derby, and two men came up and took the boots from his feet. Owen was subsequently apprehended with the boots in his possession. A witness spoke to seeing two men steal the boots, and though he could not identify them as either of the prisoners, he said they were similarly attired. Owen, who had the boots in his possession, was committed for trial. The bench did not consider the evidence sufficient as regarded Holt, and, giving him the benefit of the doubt, ordered his discharge.
